THE HIGH SCHOOL OF COMMERCE—A HISTORY

In September, 1915, the newest and best equipped high school in New England was opened to its first classes of 1,058 students under the instruction of 44 teachers. The curriculum included commercial, cultural, domestic science, and manual training courses, all of which aimed to encourage the students to uphold the school motto—"Industry and Integrity." The adapted Collegiate Tudor style building, which cost over a million dollars, rested on 1,236 piles driven into swampy land through which a brook once flowed. The school occupied 60,500 square feet and measured one-eighth of a mile around the four corridors on any floor. The building, built of red shale brick with limestone trimming, was designed to accommodate 1,500 students but through re-arrangement of space can now hold 2,200.

This completed dream of the High School of Commerce had begun almost twenty years earlier when, under the direction of Carlos B. Ellis, a commercial department was organized as a part of Classical (then Central) High School. At that time in 1898, the department occupied one room and had 37 pupils with two instructors. Its growth caused the department to move to Technical High School eight years later. In 1910 the commercial department was organized as a separate school under the name of the High School of Commerce, but sessions were held during the afternoons at Central High School until the new building was erected on upper State Street.

Under the guidance of Carlos B. Ellis, originator and first principal, the High School of Commerce became nationally famous and was ranked as one of the very first commercial high schools of the United States. It was also one of the first commercial schools to win certificate rights to such colleges as Dartmouth, to Boston and New York Universities, and to the Massahusetts State Colleges. The French government once honored the school by sending a group of forty girls for a two-year course of intensive business training.

During the next years Commerce continued to grow in numbers and curriculum. Jerome Burtt followed Mr. Ellis as principal for three years. In 1933 Stanley O. Smith, who had previously served as a teacher at Commerce for eleven years, returned as principal, familiar with the traditions of the school and respectful of its prestige. The enrollment that school year was 2,292, with teachers numbering 83. Enrollment diminished during the War (1943 saw the number drop to 1,250) not only in Commerce but throughout the city. The number of students gradually began to rise, however, at the end of World War II and continued throughout the principalship of Oscar Y. Gamel, who served from 1953 to 1958.

Philip A. Sweeney has been principal for the past seven years. Today all 144 rooms of the unusually well kept building are brimful of 1,770 young men and women.

Fifty years have passed since Mr. Ellis first put his ideas into action. Commerce graduates, numbering over 25,000, have done outstanding work at some of the best colleges and universities, including Harvard and Yale. They have entered the business world, becoming presidents of banks and insurance companies. Graduates have also gone into legal work and the teaching profession. Some have become mayors, city clerks, and treasurers.

We are proud of our school and of the men and women before us who have built its traditions.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Foreword

The massive red-brick school on the hill has been a second home to generations of teenagers. While their enthusiasms in study and recreation remain constant, fixed in the same tradition of living vigorously, their faces and fashions do change.

On the golden anniversary of the High School of Commerce, Caduceus 1965 has tried to commemorate this change by reproducing several early yearbook designs and photographs.

Secretarial

Stenography, Transcription, Typing, Machine Calculation and Duplicating are the subjects that compose the secretarial course at the High School of Commerce. These provide a varied training for all who plan to enter the business world.

Stenography II is a double period: one period of dictation and the following period of transcription. First taking notes in her notebook (above) and then transcribing them (right) onto the typewriter from her notes in a true secretarial manner is Margaret Brown.

English

English is the foundation for all studies. Our faculty helps to build this strong base, preparing either college- or business-bound students for the future.

Debating provides an opportunity for students in Mrs. Griffin's English classes to develop their confidence in speaking before groups. Participating above are Linda Fuller, Jackie Smith, Eddie Scanlon, Frannie Keyes, Linda Avery, and Linda Cieplik.

After-school classes in college English help seniors to more fully comprehend literature that is studied in class. Among the group are Jeanne Wroblewski, Kathy McNally, Meg Kestler, Carolyn Magistri, Francis Lamoureux, Mr. Grant, and Bonnie Murphy.

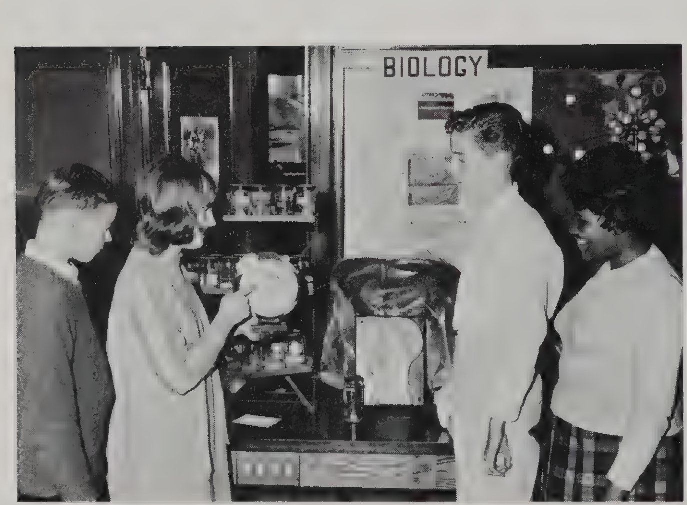
Science

The study of the physical sciences is an important part of the High School of Commerce curriculum. Through these courses, business and college-bound students gain a better understanding of their environment.



The model of the eye enables biology students James Hughes, Chris Rusby, Kevin Sheehan, and Vivian Rucks to more closely evaluate the structure of the eye.

The study of laboratory procedures is an important phase of chemistry. Sharon Cabra finds experiments fascinating.

Girls Physical Education

The girls in the gym classes take advantage of the fine spring and fall weather in addition to indoor gymnasium facilities to maintain physical fitness through various sports.

Stunts and tumbling find eager participants in Viola Langevin, Yvonne Jalbert, Jarilyn Schoolcraft, Angela Bertone, and Grace Tucci

One of the most popular fall sports for the girls is field hockey. Here the girls playfully banter for the puck.

Boys Physical Education

Besides providing an opportunity for all boys to become physically fit, the gym classes also try to instill in them realization of the importance of sportsmanship and team effort. Participation in such sports as baseball, football, and basketball is another part of the varied activities open to boys.

Vertigo! Some apparatus work simply makes Edward Kalish's hair stand on end. (Our editor became dizzy, too.)

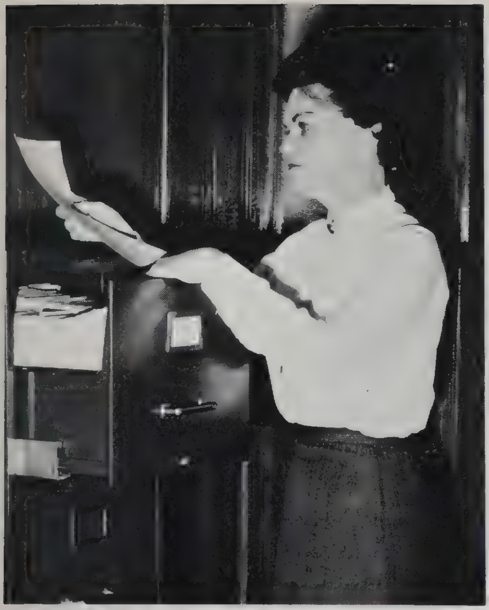
JOHN J. TROY, JR.
B.S., M.Ed.

(Right) Behind-the-wheel training, taught by Mr. Troy and Miss Greenleaf, is offered to seniors as part of the Driver Education course.



(Above) The complicated and often tedious task of sorting the senior class is in the capable hands of Mrs. Ellis. (Below) Caring for Commerce's sick is Nurse Croken's duty.

Mrs. Malone, Mrs. Freeman, and Miss Rearden comprise the office clerical staff that assures the smooth running of daily activities.

Service Personnel

Thanks to our lunchroom personnel, our noon meals are excellent. (Seated) Mrs. Mary A. Connolly, Mrs. Gertrude Odato, Mrs. Bernadette Scully. (Standing) Mrs. Delores Regis, Mrs. Hazel Robinson, and Mrs. Francine T. Anderson.

Such custodians as Mr. Newman can be relied upon to keep the school in good working order.

QUEEN OF THE PROM
Betty Zajdel

The Senior Prom
May 29, 1965
Municipal Auditorium

THE QUEEN'S COURT. Seated: Linda Suares, Barbara Furlani. Standing: Laurie Vezina, Judy Dahlia, Carol Little.

From Magic Moments

"When was the last time your husband asked YOU to dance?" In the Prom receiving line are Mr. and Mrs. Finnegan, Mr. and Mrs. Meacham, Mr. and Mrs. Mannix, and Mr. and Mrs. Penna.

Dancing to seasonal Christmas music of Eddie Mari's orchestra, the seniors enjoy the evening of December 18th. The theme of the Christmas Dance is "Mistletoe Magic," and the school gym is gaily decorated for the special occasion.

To Mistletoe

Members of the Christmas Dance Committee are Linda Dore, Carole Davies, Stan Czochara, and Ronnie Paquette.

General Organization (G. O.)

Janice Kennedy introduces the special assembly in September to acquaint underclassmen with the benefits of joining G.O.

"You know it really was worth it to join G.O.," says Joe Pioggia to Neal Somerville as they discuss the benefits of G.O.

The General Organization plays an important part in the financing of many school activities. It promotes school spirit as well as offering savings to its members on such items as Caduceus, games, and dance tickets. In addition, those who join G.O. are privileged to attend a special assembly paid for by their dues.

Here is a typical scene in the G. O. Accounting Room. Filomena Costa and Diane Hoffman (right) are collecting deposit money from homeroom agents during the yearbook subscription drive.

Commerce

The monthly newspaper of our school keeps us informed on all important events. Its special editorials and sports reports are of particular interest.

Providing hilarious entertainment at the special assembly for G.O. members were Joe Doris and Roy Williams.

Here they are again, doing a beatle sketch to the delightment of the girls.

Assemblies

Assemblies play an important role in school life. They are diversified to provide edification and enjoyment for the entire student body. They range from professional entertainment to the reading of the honor roll.

One of the highlights of the school year is the Christmas Assembly, under the direction of Mr. Nickerson.

"I want my mommy," sobs little Steve Willey as he is interviewed by "Art Linkletter" (David Corbin). Not too interested in Steve's problems, Nancy Collings, Emilia D'Amato, Diane Wiesel, and Martha Mularz are up to tricks of their own.

COMMERCE CAPERS

One of the many attractions of the Hawaiian Islands is the lovely Hula dancers. Linda Simmons, one of these graceful dancers, entertains some of the men from McHale's Navy.

"When I Fall in Love," is sung by Joanne Crocker.

During her stay in the hospital, Penny Zielinsky pays no heed to treatment prescribed by Doctors Kildare and Casey. She still persists in sleepily performing a midnight dance.

Granny Mossback, otherwise known as Ronnie Paquette, proves that feeble old ladies are capable of doing more than drinking tea and munching crumpets.

Special entertainment for the sailors in McHale's Navy is provided by Grace Tucci, who performs a series of acrobatic dance steps.

The Red Cross makes life more pleasant for handicapped children at Monson State Hospital by its contributions which pay for their much needed treatments. At the beginning of this year, for example, the Junior Red Cross held a successful perfume and soap drive.

Carol Fortier, Kathy Cox, Joan Irwin, Diane Pina, and Barbara Kuc, members of the Junior Red Cross, seem elated that the drive for perfume and soap held during the winter was so successful.

Future Nurses Club

Future Nurses Club is a brand new organization this year. The members have cheered adult hospital patients and volunteered to work with children at the Providence Hospital.

Officers of the Future Nurses Club: Carlotta Hankins, secretary; Linda LaPine, president; Jackie Smith, vice-president; Lynelle Kelley, treasurer.

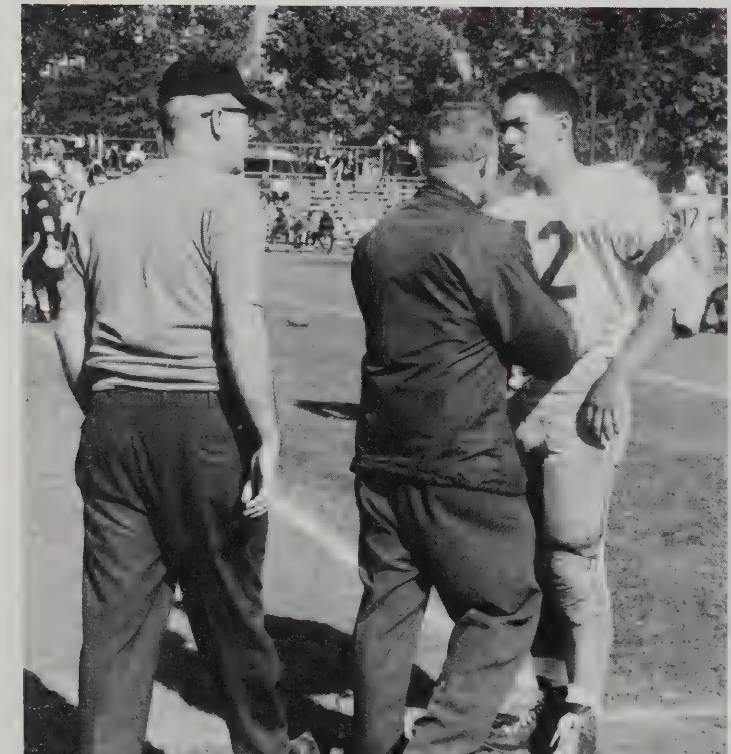
Raider Eleven Posts 3–4 Season



John Wright discusses game strategy with Coaches Troy and Mahoney.

Led by thirteen returning lettermen, the football Raiders compiled a record of 3 wins and 4 losses. The three wins not only equaled last year's high but also included some impressive games: the big 20-0 upset of Arms Academy and the rout of Assumption Prep by the same margin. The Raiders featured the exciting running of team captain Marion Streeter, who displayed the fine qualities of leadership. Also in the backfield was fullback Joe Pioggia, who always gave 100% effort and received recognition for his fine play by being placed on the All-City football squad and being elected team captain for 1965. Floyd Narcisse and Bob Davis rounded out the backfield. Of the seven starting linemen, the Raiders boasted six veterans.

Skaters Post Only Two Wins

In their first campaign, the Red Raider sextet posted only a 2-15 record. But the always underdog Raiders displayed great poise in this experience-gaining season. The two wins were over Palmer and Holyoke. Coach Zemla and the players deserve praise for their determination during this trying season. With only three seniors on the team, next year's team can look forward to a more promising season with one year of experience behind them.

Grapplers Place Third in City

A combination of overall team effort and several determined individual efforts aided the Crimson wrestling squad attain a winning 4-3 record. This record enabled them to place third in the Interschool League. Juniors Rocky Greene and Joe Pioggia were undefeated, while Marion Streeter was only once defeated during regular season meets. In the Western Mass. meet the Raider grapplers scored 21 points to finish fourth.

Acknowledgements

The Editorial Staff and its adviser, Mr. Ellison, wish to thank

Miss McCleary and her student staff, Joyce Dembroski, Sandra Letourneau, Judith Louer, and Rosemarie Clefe, for making the appointments and producing the photographs.

Mr. Jones, our faculty photographer, for his willingness to help the members of the staff.

Miss Henderson and Miss Grace Connell and their senior assistant, Diane Hoffman, for arranging and producing the senior portraits.

Lorraine Worrell for her artistic reproduction of calendars.

Robert Cogswell and Donald Senecal for the candid photos, which added humor and fun to the undergraduate sections of the book.

Mr. Alminas, Rosemarie Osborne, and the Business Staff for the financing and distributing of the book.

The administration and faculty for their help and patience in all the staffs requests and interruptions.

Mr. Jack Brown of T. O'Toole and Sons for his help and instruction in the technical production of the book.

Mr. Arthur Poudrier of Bosworth Studios for his cooperation with several last-minute photo requirements.

Mrs. Barbara Ellis of the senior counselor's office for compiling vital senior data speedily and cheerfully.
